CONGRATULATIONS, Ellery Kruse for your 1st place essay in the Sauk County contest on "The Importance of Dairy in Wisconsin."

The Importance of Dairy in Wisconsin By Ellery Kruse

Do you like cheese? I know I do. You can thank dairy farmers for supplying the main ingredient. Today, you will be learning about how dairy is important to our communities, our bodies, and our economy.

Our Wisconsin dairy farms produce a lot of jobs. Some of those important jobs include: milk truck drivers, farmers, grocery store workers, cheese or ice cream factory workers, and much more. It also brings our community together. We have festivals, like Butterfest, that bring in thousands of people to small towns. It is also fun to go to the ice cream shop with friends. Dairy is really important to a lot of our communities in Wisconsin.

Dairy is very important for our bodies. We need three servings of dairy a day to keep our bones strong and healthy. In Wisconsin, we make more than 2.8 billion pounds of cheese a year. Milk is made up of 87% water and 13% fat. It also contains minerals, carbohydrates, protein, and vitamins that are good for our bodies. Wisconsin makes 600 different kinds of cheese. Our cheese is sold to 140 different countries so many people can enjoy the dairy we make here in Wisconsin.

Our dairy in Wisconsin brings in 43.4 billion tax dollars every year for our economy. Our state uses tax money to help with improving our communities and it makes Wisconsin a better place. For example, our libraries and other public buildings are supported by money. Our dairy is sold all around the world, and that is part of the reason we are America's Dairyland.

That is just a few of the many ways that dairy impacts people in Wisconsin. I hope you learned just how important the dairy industry is to our communities, our bodies, and our economy.
